OAC SUMMER SCHOOL.

The purpose of the Summer Session at the Oregon Agricultural College is, primarily, to provide opportunity for the teachers of the State to obtain some training in Industrial Pedagogy and related subjects.

President Roosevelt's Country Life Commission in its report states that the subject of paramount importance, as developed by the inquiries of the Commission, is education.

"In every part of the United States there seems to be one mind, on the part of those capable of judging, on the necessity of redirecting the rural schools. There is no such unanimity on any other subject. It is remarkable with what similarity of phrase the subject has been discussed in all parts of the country before the Commission. Everywhere there is a demand that education have relation to living, that the schools should express the daily life, and that in rural communities they should educate by means of Agriculture and Country Life subjects."

The demands throughout the State and country have rapidly increased during recent years for skilled mechanics and for men and women trained for special work in agriculture, and in home economics. As these demands have increased, it has been realized more and more that the system of public education, the work of which has been arranged in the common schools as a preparation for admission to the high schools, and in the high schools for admission to college, was not meeting the needs of the people, more than ninety per cent of whom are engaged in industrial occupations. It was in response to this demand for the preparation of teachers for industrial work in public that the Board of Regents took advantage of the opportunity afforded by the Nelson Act in establishing the department of Industrial Pedagogy. As already observed, the Federal appropriation, under a provision of the Nelson Act, is available for the maintenance of this department. In this work, provision is made for two classes of teachers: first those who are to teach in normal schools, high schools and other schools of secondary or college grade; and, second, those who are to teach in the common schools of both the city and the rural districts. The technical training required for teachers of the first class may be had in the regular college course leading to degrees, provision being made for the special pedagogical work in the department of Industrial Pedagogy. It is not necessary, however, that teachers in the common schools should be college graduates. The work they require is of a more elementary character and can be had in one or two years of the Secondary Industrial courses.

In July, 1907, the Board of Regents authorized the organization of a course in agriculture to be offered during the summer vacation, in order that the teachers of the State might receive some special preparation for the use of the agricultural book which has been adopted for the seventh and eighth grades of the public schools. On account of the general demand referred to above for work in other industrial subjects, and the establishment of the department of Industrial Pedagogy, made possible by the passage of Nelson Act, it is planned to have the work of this school cover a much broader field and extend over a period of five or six weeks. The pedagogical work will be in charge of the Professor of Industrial Pedagogy and others who might be employed to assist; while the technical work in the different subjects of agriculture, forestry, domestic science, commerce and mechanic arts, will be given by the professors in charge of these departments of the college. The work of this school will be of special value to teachers who are unable to attend the College through the school year, but who desire to begin industrial work in their schools. It is planned also to give the teachers in the county institutes as much assistance as possible in this work. By these different agencies, it is expected that the College will be able to render very valuable service in extending the advantages of industrial education.

While the courses of the Summer Session are primarily for teachers, it is believed that oth-

THE HAWAIIAN BUILDING, A-Y-P. EXPOSITION, SEATTLE.

The building erected at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition for the exclusive use of the Hawaiian Islands, occupies a prominent position on the Court of Honor next the central government structure.

Hawaii has prepared a more extensive and comprehensive exhibit of its marvelous resources than for any other world's fair. It will show all of its native fruits and vegetables; will offer an aquarium of live fish, and in various other ways interest the fair visitors. Fruits will be served by native girls and native orchestras and singers will be always on hand. A tank in the center of the structure will show the islands as they rest in the Pacific Ocean.

Upwards of $100,000 has been expended in assembling Hawaii's display.

ers who are interested in country homes and country life problems will find them of value also.

College students who are deficient in their studies are advised to take advantage of the opportunity to make up back work and thus be prepared to register without conditions at the beginning of the fall semester. Other students will have the time, will also find it of advantage to supplement and broaden their courses by taking additional work in the Summer School.

Mill Burned At Union

The sawmill and planer owned by J. A. Evans, eight miles east of Union, was destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. The fire broke out about 4 o'clock and was beyond control before discovered. The property destroyed was worth about $4000, which will be a total loss to the owner, as there was no insurance. About 150,000 feet of lumber in the yards was saved from the flames.
